

ExPhiladelphia cop cleared on rape charges; convicted of sex assault

Posted:12/14/2010 4:11 PM

By MENSAH M. DEAN
deanm@phillynews.com

Tyrone Wiggins, a former city cop who survived being shot while on duty and won numerous awards during a 23-year career, was taken into custody this afternoon after being convicted of sexually assaulting a girl over more than eight years.

Wiggins, 51, resigned from the force the day before he was arrested in November 2009. His face showed no expression this afternoon when the Common Pleas Court jury foreman announced that Wiggins was guilty of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse, aggravated indecent assault, statutory sexual assault and corruption of a minor. The jury found the married father of four not guilty of rape.

Judge Sandy L.V. Byrd set March 25 as Wiggins' sentencing date. He could face a maximum sentence of 22 to 45 years in prison, said Assistant District Attorney Mark Cipolletti, who prosecuted the case.

Wiggins' victim, now a 25-year-old city cop, testified that she met Wiggins at age 10 when she began taking karate lessons from him at the Olney Recreation Center.

She told the jury that Wiggins, an 8th-degree black belt, began raping her at age 12.

"Anyone that is a potential victim out there, come forward. There is hope and there is someone who will believe you," the woman said shortly after the verdict was read.

Ex-Philly cop convicted of 4 sex crimes

By MENSAH M. DEAN
Philadelphia Daily News
deanm@phillynews.com

Tyrone Wiggins, a former city cop who survived being shot while on duty and won numerous awards during a 23-year career, was taken into custody this afternoon after being convicted of sexually assaulting a girl over more than eight years.

Wiggins, 51, resigned from the force the day before he was arrested in November 2009. His face showed no expression this afternoon when the Common Pleas Court jury foreman announced that Wiggins was guilty of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse, aggravated indecent assault, statutory sexual assault and corruption of a minor. The jury found the married father of four not guilty of rape.

Judge Sandy L.V. Byrd set March 25 as Wiggins' sentencing date. He could face a maximum sentence of 22 to 45 years in prison, said Assistant District Attorney Mark Cipolletti, who prosecuted the case.

Wiggins' victim, now a 25-year-old city cop, testified that she met Wiggins at age 10 when she began taking karate lessons from him at the Olney Recreation Center.

She told the jury that Wiggins, an 8th-degree black belt, began raping her at age 12.

"Anyone that is a potential victim out there, come forward. There is hope and there is someone who will believe you," the woman said shortly after the verdict was read.

Read more: http://www.philly.com/dailynews/breaking/news/20101214_Ex-cop_cleared_on_rape_charges__convicted_of_assault.html#ixzz18876QLPy
Watch sports videos you won't find anywhere else

Phila. cop convicted on multiple sex charges

By Joseph A. Slobodzian
Inquirer Staff Writer

A Philadelphia Common Pleas Court jury this afternoon convicted a retired, 23-year Philadelphia police officer guilty of multiple sex charges for carrying on a sexual relationship with a woman that began when she was 12 and continued into adulthood.

The jury returned about 2:30 p.m. after finding Tyrone Wiggins, 51, guilty of four sexual assault charges including corrupting the morals of a minor. The jury, however, acquitted Wiggins of rape.

The victim, now 25 and herself a police officer, broke into deep sobs after the verdict.

Wiggins, an 8th-degree black belt who began the sexual relationship when the woman was a student in his Olney karate school, showed no apparent emotion at the verdict.

Judge Sandy L.V. Byrd ordered Wiggins taken immediately into custody pending a sentencing on March 25.